New publication

Datafied Childhoods examines the multiple ways in which datafication, algorithms, and artificial intelligence (AI) transform the contexts for children: at home, school, and in peer and parent-child relationships. The COVID-19 pandemic provides an important moment for reimagining how data are repurposed for the social good and best interests of children.

GIOVANNA MASCHERONI (PhD, Università Cattolica) is Associate Professor of Sociology of Media in the Department of Communication at Università Cattolica.
